WEST POINT FLOUR MILLS.

THIS Establishment is now ready to receive orders for Rice to be cleaned, and the undersigned are prepared to receive, land, store, clean and ship Rice in any quantities. A new large and very powerful boiler has been expressly imported for the Mills, and large costly additions have been made to the Machinery which is now in full and perfect working order, the improvements which have been effected enabling the undersigned to guarantee the cleaning of Rice in a manner not to be equalled either by any other Mills in the East, or by the ludicrious hand labour of the Chinese. The Mills can clean and turn out six hundred piculs of Rice in the working day and if greater expedition is required it can be attained. The Godowns are made of granite and are large, airy and impervious against the heat of low ranges. The pier has sufficient water at all states of the tide to allow the largest cargo boats to lie, alongside and load or discharge as may be required.

Terms can be ascertained on application to the undersigned at the Mills where orders will be received. Persons unable to attend at the Mill will be waited on at their offices and all orders carefully and promptly executed.

THE pirates of Tamtoo island have made another capture. The American schooner left here on Saturday morning for Yokohama. While proceeding slowly out of the passage she was attacked between 8 and 9 o'clock in the evening by three pirate junks. They boarded, took everything of value, and broke up the cabin fittings. The Captain attempted a defence, but was not sufficiently strong to resist them. Two men are missing, (supposed to be killed), and the mate is badly wounded.

IT is announced in the Government Gazette that the Hon. James Whittall, Esq. has received from the Queen the necessary exequatur to enable him to act as Hawaiian Consul in Hongkong.

WE welcome the first number of our new contemporary the Hankow Times and recognise with great pleasure an educated style in the writing and a healthy tone of thought.

IN the Government Gazette of Saturday is published a long circular despatch from the colonial office, on the subject of the Paris Universal Exhibition of 1867. This document which is far too long for us to reproduce, includes the general regulations for the Exhibition adopted last July. The government (of Hongkong) promises to give immediate attention to any claims for space or communications on this subject.

SOME facts which have come to our knowledge seem to show that we are still a long way off any satisfactory adjustment of the great steamboat dispute. The "battle of the guages," in the beginning of railway enterprise, the famous rivalry between "the Garden" and "the Lane," all previous struggles for life between competing companies, sink into insignificance beside the duel à la mort in which the navigators of the Canton river are engaged. Achilles defying Agamemnon to rob him of Briseis, assumed an attitude of mild deprecation, compared to that which has been adopted by the American firm engaged in this mighty conflict in answer to an attempt on the part of the company to deprive them of the Plymouth Rock. It would seem that the company—playing the part of the great Atrides,—has demanded that Briseis shall be given up by her possessor for the general good. It does not propose however that Achilles shall make this sacrifice without adequate compensation. Terms of the most favorable kind are offered him, but "the anger of the son of Peleus" is not to be appeased by shares in the Hongkong, Canton, and Macao Steam-packet Company. In answer to the reasonable, not to say liberal proposals, Messrs. Russell & Co. reply by what Artemus Ward might call "one of their silvery larfs." The company asks what they will take to give up the competition which is acting so injuriously on the community, and the firm simply answers that it is ready to purchase the boats of the company at a valuation below their original cost. We vaguely remember to have heard of a gentleman travelling on an American railroad who said he was going to New York, and that, it he liked the place, he meant to buy it. Perhaps Messrs. Russell & Co. know him.

We hear that when the above answer was returned, the company made an effort to establish a joint tariff, but with no success. Messrs. Russell & Co. were determined, they said, to run the company off the river or perish in the attempt. Looking on at the struggle from an impartial point of view it seems, to us that there is something obviously unwise in the conduct of one firm struggling with a joint-stock association. Such struggles have taken place before, but they have always ended one way. In the old days of wild Irish extravagance we have heard of a challenge from one country gentleman to another to "drop sovereigns" with him along the road. Each competitor flung away his money in rivalry with the other, till one of them had no more to fling. In such conflicts we believed it was generally found the longest purse won. Messrs. Russell & Co. are dropping sovereigns against the company in the bed of the Canton river, and we do not doubt that they have the power of dropping a very great number if they please. Still there is reason to suppose that the shareholders in the company, put together, could drop more, and so far as perseverance is concerned, a body of men resisting a monopoly are at least as likely to go on with the game, as a single firm trying to ride rough-shod over all the rest.

At the present moment there is a peculiar reason which must make all disinterested spectators anxious that the strife should cease. Mr. Robertson, the Consul has obtained from the Chinese Authorities permission for the Company to receive and discharge passengers at Chum-pee. Cargo for Chun-pee will have to go to Canton to be passed, but cargo from Chun-pee for Hongkong will be brought down direct. The company is going to have a receiving hulk at the place named and it will be obvious that an opportunity for developing the trade of the Canton river, which has long been sought for in vain, is now offered to British enterprise. How is it possible however that proper advantage can be taken of it, while the energies of both parties are cramped by the costly game which they are playing? If Messrs. Russell & Co. would take the proferred olive branch all would go well. They themselves would of course gain in a greater degree than any body else, but the community generally would be the richer as well, by being saved a drain on its resources. Hongkong would no longer be overrun by swarms of Chinese roughs from Canton, and a new development might be given to local trade.

WE think the Canton residents have a very substantial case against the Hongkong Race Club. Our readers will have seen from a letter which we published on Saturday, that in spite of the public hospitality shown at Canton during the late race meeting, to visitors from Hongkong, the Race Club here has not by any means acted in a reciprocal spirit. The arrangements for the coming meeting have been made in private, and the existence of an outside public interested in racing, has been altogether ignored. It is very well for the owners of large racing stables to form a club, and take the lead in arrangements relating to the annual meetings, but such a private association should remember that it is not a governing body, and that the course belongs to the community in general. The Jockey Club at home exercises very considerable influence over the affairs of the racing world, and at Newmarket has something more than influence, because the ground on which the course is laid out, actually belongs to its own members, but in spite of this it remains a private organisation, having no authority whatever, so far as great public races are concerned. All races here are, or should be, public, and the arrangements of each meeting, even if the club be suffered to make them, should be published in time to enable anyone who wishes to enter a horse, in accordance with proper regulations, to do so at his pleasure. At Canton, our correspondent says that no programme, notification, or announcement of any kind was received, beyond a general statement that the meeting would take place some time in February. "A sporting member of the community" did, it seems, send to enter a pony and was told that he was too late! The constitution of the Hongkong Race Club should make it peculiarly careful not to transgress the limits of its proper influence. It is an imperium in imperio, and has been freely accused of overbearing conduct even towards Hongkong residents. We do not want to complain of the lead it takes. That as we have said, is fair and natural enough, but the club must remember that racing is a public amusement for the purposes of which land has been lent by the government to the community at large. At any time the administration would have the power of resuming possession of the course, and this must convince the club that if the government recommended any new rules, designed in the public interest, compliance would be inevitable. If the government were spared the unpleasant necessity of interfering with the monopolising tendencies of the club, by spontaneous action on the part of members of that body, it would surely be more satisfactory to all parties concerned, than if proper regulations were exacted.

News from the North.

THE Mona arrived yesterday with news from Shanghai to the 17th inst. From the papers we have received we make the following extracts:—

A despatch was received by the Governor-general of this province on the 16th ultimo, embodying the views and wishes of the Peking authorities with regard to the grain and bean trade with the Northern ports and Manchuria. Some months ago Li Futai memorialized the throne setting forth the miseries which had befallen the junk men who had until the arrival of foreign ships and steamers enjoyed the monopoly of the Northern trade. He represented in moving terms the wrongs inflicted on thousands of natives by the diversion of the trade into foreign bottoms, and recommended that the Peking Cabinet should devise some means whereby the position of the junk owners and others interested might be ameliorated. The Tsung-li yamên, through the Board of War, has now issued a Notification setting forth the arguments adduced by Li Futai, and calling upon the merchants to ship in native vessels, while the junk owners are recommended "try their luck" and not be cast down by the present unpromising aspect of affairs. The notification is addressed to the native residents at the Northern ports and Manchuria and to those who frequent those ports for purposes of trade.

On Monday the 11th the annual general meeting of the Volunteer Corps was held, when it was resolved that the Corps should be kept up, the members promising to attend regularly at drill and parade. The officers for the ensuing year were elected, and a resolution passed to the effect that inasmuch as the Volunteers are now unable to discharge the debt incurred by Mr. Webb, they are willing to hand over the Main Guard and Rifle Butts to him, and pay rent for the use of them. Grande, Watts and Stevens, the men implicated in the murder of MacDonald, keeper of the International Hotel at Hankow have been brought to Shanghai, and will on Saturday next, be put on their trial for Wilful Murder.

The Rajah of Cochin has been detained in the river in consequence of a stupid joke on the part of her master at the expense of the Russian gunboat. Full particulars will be found in our daily issue.

From Hankow we have little of importance to notice except the establishment of the Hankow Times and Hankow Price Current and Market Report. Both papers are well got up, and reflect much credit on the energetic projectors of the scheme.

Three Chinamen hanged themselves on Sunday night in different parts of the English settlement. One was discovered suspended by a piece of twisted cloth from the branch of a tree opposite the house on the Soochow creek now occupied by Mr. Hanpock, and two others were at 6 p.m. found hanging in a house 286 M. in the Nankin Road. Life was extinct in all three cases before assistance. No light has been thrown on the motives which prompted the suicides.

We read the following remonstrance addressed to ourselves in the North China Daily News.

The dilatoriness of our Hongkong contemporary of the Daily Press in forwarding the Straits Times to this office causes so much inconvenience both to ourselves and our subscribers, that finding private remonstrance vain, we are compelled publicly to call our contemporary's attention to the matter. No copies of the Straits Times Extra were forwarded to us by the French mail steamer, and although in this particular instance there was no intelligence worth reproducing, the same thing would doubtless have occurred had the most important mercantile or political news come forward. We are convinced that our contemporary will realise the extremely unpleasant position in which the neglect places us, and will remedy it for the future.

Our readers will remember that at the beginning of the year we announced that for the future we could not undertake to distribute the Strait Times Extra, and that we had made arrangements with Messrs. Lane, Crawford and Co. for the performance of this service by them. We hope that as the new system begins to operate, the subscribers in Shanghai will find it satisfactory.

Supreme Court.
CRIMINAL SESSIONS.
HONGKONG, 19th January, 1866.
BEFORE THE HON. J. H. BALL, ESQ.
And the following jury,
JOSEPH F. HALLIDAY
FREDERIC TIMOTHY SMITH.
FRITZ EAFF
CHARLES JAMESON
FREDERIC C. ADAMS
GEORGE THOMPSON
EDGAR FIGGESS

YUNG AYON was brought up and was sentenced to one year's additional imprisonment to the term he was serving when he escaped.

The Attorney General applied that the case of the Queen v. Melville be postponed until the next session, as the prosecuting witness was in so precarious a state at the Hospital, as to prevent his attendance at Court. Application granted.

JAMES GRAY, stood charged upon an indictment for feloniously stealing one opera glass, one knife, a quantity of clothing, &c.

There was a second count for feloniously receiving the same knowing them to be stolen.

The prisoner pleaded Not Guilty.

The Attorney General having explained the nature of the charge called,

John McPhie, who being sworn said—I am a ship's officer. I was living at the Sailor's Home and I left there and went to live at Wilson's boarding house in Hollywood Road. That was in November, last and I stayed there a fortnight. I left on the 9th. When I went away I left behind me a chest of drawers containing wearing apparel. It was locked. I told Wilson and Clegg his runner, to look after it during my absence. Beside the chest of drawers I left a large clothes chest, a chart box, some boots and shoes, and my bed and bedding. The drawers contained wearing apparel of all kinds. Before I went away I locked the drawers and chest and showed Clegg that they were locked. I was absent from the 9th to the 15th. On my return, I went to Wilson's boarding house and found the prisoner there; I asked him if he knew anything about my clothes? I saw that my boxes had all been broken open. I found the locks of the seven drawers all prized out with a chisel, and the big chest must have been broken up with a hammer. My clothes had been taken out and I found nothing but trashy things in the drawers. I asked the prisoner about it. He replied he did not know anything at all about them. I found some of my charts in the room and I took them away then. After that I went to the magistrate to get a warrant. When I first went to the house I was refused admittance; the prisoner was not at home then. When I went to the house with the warrant the door was not open. The inner door was not opened until the officer threatened to break it open. The prisoner was out at that time. I went into the house with two officers, Ashton and Baker, Mr Roberts and Mr and Mrs Gray. That room was above, and was the same room where I found my charts. I searched a chest of drawers that did not belong to me, and therein I found an opera glass, some shirts, some trowsers, and other things that were my property. I found this clothing (produced) it is mine. I found it in a trunk in the room and under the bed. This knife (produced) I found in the chest of drawers. This pipe was found in the chest of drawers. Some of the things in Court were found in a box which was locked when we first went into the room, and the prisoner refused to open it, saying he had not the keys. The prisoner also prevented the officer from doing his duty as much as he could. A woman was there who called herself Mrs Gray, and she said that the opera glass belonged to her, and that she bought it in Hongkong two years ago. The prisoner said the same. He always said the same as the woman said, and tried to pull the things out of the hands of the officer. I value all the things that I lost at between $500 and $600. Only a few of the worst things are in Court. The articles in Court are worth more than $25.

By the prisoner:—Did I own that the opera glass was mine?

Witness:—Yes.

Q.—Did I refuse to break open the chest?

A.—Yes, you said that you had not the keys, that the keys were lost.

Q.—Did you find all these things in my custody?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Where were the charts when you found them?

A.—Under the table.

Q.—Did you not say before the Police Magistrate that you found the charts over the door where you had left them?

A.—No.

His Lordship read over the depositions and said the witness had not said what the prisoner now affirmed.

Edward Ashton (P.C. 9), sworn:—I recollect the 15th December last. On that day I went with the last witness to the prisoner's house, and asked permission to search it, but I did not obtain permission to do so. I then obtained a warrant and upon returning to the prisoner's house admission was refused. When we got inside we saw a woman. At that time there were there, Baker, the prosecutor, and myself. We searched the lower part of the house and did not find anything. After searching the ground floor we went to the middle floor were we found a shirt. Just then the prisoner entered and I produced my warrant, showed it to him and asked admittance upstairs. The prisoner read the warrant and said he would sooner be taken to the Police Station than let us up. Baker then said "constable execute your warrant." I then opened the door leading to the upper story. It was fastened by a small chain that went over an iron bar. Baker pushed the chain back with his hand. The door was opened without breaking it. The prisoner was present at this time. We went into the upper room and began to search. A woman was present and interfered with us. I found an opera glass, and the prosecutor claimed it as his property. The woman said it was her's and that she had bought it in Hongkong. I think she said it was four years ago. The woman interfered with me by catching hold of my hand. The prisoner interfered also, and swore that the opera glass belonged to him and that the other things were his too. I cannot exactly remember the words that he used, but he swore that the things belonged to him. When we found the things the prosecutor claimed them first; then the woman denied that they were his; and then the prisoner said that they were his property. He said he had a mark by which he could indentify the opera glass. The woman also claimed other things. There were two boxes in the room which I wanted to search. They were locked and I asked the prisoner for the keys; he replied the keys were lost. I then called in an Indian constable and left him in charge of the place, whilst I took the prisoner and the woman to the station. I returned the same day to the prisoner's house accompanied by him and the prosecutor, and by order of the magistrate I broke open the boxes which I could not previously search. I found in the first chest thirty three pieces of clothing which were claimed by the prosecutor as his property. In the second box I did not find anything. The prisoner said that the property found in the first chest belonged to him. I took the contents of the box to the station and delivered all the articles into the custody of the Inspector on duty. It was not Jones, it was Daly. Inspector Jones has had charge of them since I think.

By the prisoner:—Did I say anything to you when I returned and found you in the house?

Witness:—I showed you the warrant.

Q.—Did I refuse you admittance upstairs?

A.—Yes; you said you would sooner go to the station.

Q.—Did I refuse to open the box?

A.—Yes.

William Clegg, sworn:—I am a barkeeper but am out of a situation at present. In November last I was living with Wilson as steward. I know the prosecutor. Last November he was residing at Wilson's boarding-house and occupied the same room that I did. I recollect him leaving the house. He left on the Saturday evening about 6.30, and Wilson went away the same evening about 8. The prosecutor remained away about five days. The prisoner was working for Wilson; he came to work for him three days before Wilson left. I had been discharged then but was living as a boarder in the house. The prisoner and his wife lived in the third story. There was only one room on that story. The prosecutor had a large chest of drawers, a large trunk, and his bedding in the house, which he left there when he went away. When he went away he gave me some instructions about his things. On the 13th I went out about 3 p.m. On my return I did not perceive anything as there was no light; but in the morning at 7 a.m. I saw that the prosecutor's box had been broken open. When I saw that, I called the prisoner and told him about it. He appeared surprised and said a few words. I cannot repeat the exact words. When I went up stairs I did not take any notice of the box.

By the Prisoner:—I did not see you take anything up stairs. I did not take anything myself to your room. I did not take a lot of things that were in the house. I did not say that one half of the things were not in the house, that ought to have been there. I did not lose any of my own clothes; my things were all out of the house at that time. You told me you had bought all the things in the house; and I told you that the things down stairs belonged to McPhie. I did not see you take anything up stairs; but you said that you would take them up. I heard the prosecutor when he returned, ask you to let him go up stairs to look for his things, and you answered, no. He got a warrant and had the house searched. You sold him there were none of his things up stairs.

By the Court:—The property in the house was seized for Wilson's debts: a distress had been put into the house by Julian; I do not know what for. There were at the time of Wilson's absconding about twenty sailors in the house, and there was nothing for them to eat. There was an auction held but I was not present at the sale. I do not know if the things in Court were put up for sale at the auction. They could not have been put up to auction as they were in the prisoner's box at the time and his private effects were not sold.

Owen Roberts sworn:—I am a seaman, I resided at Wilson's boarding-house and occupied the same room as the prosecutor. I recollect the prosecutor leaving the house. He left a camphor wood chest of drawers and box at the house. I remained in the same room after the prosecutor left. On the 15th I noticed that the boxes had been broken open. I know the prisoner; he was in the house at that time. I had no conversation with him about the boxes. It was about 7 A.M. when I first noticed that the boxes had been broken open. After the boxes had been broken open the house was auctioned off. The prisoner stopped in the house after the auction. I spoke to the prisoner about the drawers and boxes having been broken open, and he said that he could not help it, and that they had been left in charge of Clegg. The boxes were broken open two days before the auction took place. I saw that they had been broken open. On the day of the auction I saw the prisoner taking up some clothes. I did not ask him anything about the clothes.

Attorney General:—Are you sure that you did not ask him anything about the clothes when you saw him taking them up?

Witness:—Yes.

His Lordship then read the depositions taken before the Police Magistrate, in which the witness had deposed, that he had asked the prisoner where he had got the things from; and asked the witness which statement was true? Did he or did he not say anything?

Witness:—Yes I did say as you have read. I saw the prisoner take some clothes upstairs before the auction. I asked him where he had got them from? He replied from about the house; they were some dirty clothes that were knocking about the room. That is all the conversation I had with him.

By the Prisoner:—I think you were away getting the license transferred, when the auction took place, and that I was with you. After I did not mention anything to you. Before you bought the house you told me you had taken some things upstairs. I took the comforter now in Court up stairs. I put it on the sofa upstairs. You might have said that it was better to take the things upstairs but I do not remember. I saw one of the Chinese boys taking the muffler out of the house, and I took it away from him and put it upstairs. I did not take as many things up stairs as you did.

Robert Hams sworn:—I am a clerk unemployed. In November last I was in the service of Mr Haseland. In December I put in a distress on the boarding-house of Wilson. I acted as bailiff. The prisoner was there at that time. I know the prosecutor. The auction was on the Friday. The prisoner pointed out the boxes to me on the Monday when I was making the levy. At that time they seemed to be quite complete. I saw the prosecutor in presence of the prisoner on the day of the auction. The prosecutor complained that his boxes had been broken open. The prisoner could hear him. The prisoner replied that no doubt the sailors had broken open the boxes and taken the things away.

Prosecutor recalled:—I had some conversation with the prisoner on the day of the auction in the presence of Harris. The prisoner never said anything about any sailors. He said that he did not know anything about who had broken open my boxes.

This concluded the case for the prosecution. The prisoner then addressed the jury to the effect that he had gone on the 7th December to assist Wilson at the boarding-house, and that the latter had given him the upper part of the house to live in. Three days after going to the house Wilson absconded. The following week there was to be an auction; and he had told Julian that many things had been taken away. He (prisoner) thought it better to take the things up stairs as there were many Chinese servants in the house. After he had bought the house, he went about and collected the things that were lying about. He found the articles produced in Court upon Wilson's bed, and took them upstairs into his own room, and concluded by saying that if the jury thought him guilty, he hoped that they would take a lenient view of his case, as he had a wife and family depending upon him in the Colony.

In reply to a question from the learned judge the prisoner said that he had no witness to call but Roberts, (whose evidence had been taken).

His Lordship then went through the evidence and pointed out the principal points for and against the prisoner, and said that he found three written characters attached to the depositions which might be read if the Attorney General did not object.

The characters were then read: they were written by Mr Brooks, Mr J. B. Watson, and Messrs Anthony & Son, and spoke of the prisoner as being a trustworthy person.

The jury then consulted for about twenty minutes and returned a verdict of guilty of unlawful possession.

His Lordship said that was not the issue that the jury had to try. They were to find the prisoner guilty of stealing the property; or of having received it knowing it to have been stolen; or of course they could acquit him.

After a short deliberation the jury found the prisoner Guilty on the second count, but recommended the prisoner to the mercy of the Court on account of his previous good character.

His Lordship addressing the prisoner said: It is, as the learned counsel observed in his opening, a melancholy circumstance to see a person like you in the position in which you now stand. There is however one circumstance in your favour which is, that the jury has recommended you to the mercy of the Court, and I will take that recommendation into consideration. Nevertheless such offences as that of which you have been found guilty cannot go unpunished. The sentence of the Court upon you is, that you be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for twelve calendar months.

THE MESSAGE OF PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

WE gave a few lines on Saturday in explanation of the chief points of President Johnson's Message to Congress. We now lay before our readers, some considerable extracts telegraphed from Washington to San Francisco.—

To express gratitude to God in the name of the people for the preservation of the United States, is my first duty in addressing you. Our thoughts next revert to the death of the late President by the act of a parricidal treason. The grief of the Nation is still fresh, but it finds some solace in the consideration that he lived to enjoy the highest proof of its confidence by entering on a renewed term of the Chief Magistracy which he had been elected to; that he brought civil war substantially to a close; that his loss was deplored in all parts of the Union, and that foreign nations have rendered justice to his memory. His removal cast upon me a heavier weight of cares than ever devolved upon any one of his predecessors. To fulfil my trust I need the support and confidence of all who are associated with me in the various departments of the Government, and the support and confidence of the people. There is but one way in which I can hope to receive from them that necessary aid. It is, to state with frankness the principles which will guide my conduct and their application to perfect the state of affairs.

The Message then discusses the power of the Constitution of the United states, and the relations of the States of the Union. It is not the right of a State Government to renounce its own place in the Union or to nullify the laws of the Union. The largest liberty is to be maintained in the discussion of the acts of the Federal Government, but there is no appeal from its laws, except to the various branches of the Government itself, or to the people. The sovereignty of the States is the language of the Confederacy, and not the language of the Constitution.

Again he says:—"The true theory is that all the pretended acts of secession were, from the beginning, null and void. The States cannot commit treason, nor screen individual citizens who may have committed treason. The States attempting to secede placed themselves in a condition where their vitality was impaired, but not extinguished. Their functions were suspended, but not destroyed; but if any State neglect or refuse to perform its offices, there is more need that the General Government should maintain all its authority, and, as soon as practicable, resume the exercise of all its functions. On this principle I have acted, and have sought to restore the rightful energy of the General Government as well as that of the States. To that end, Provisional Governments have been appointed for the rebellious States, Conventions have been called, Governors elected, Legislatures assembled, and Representatives and Senators chosen to the Congress of the United States. I know very well this policy is attended with some risk, and that for its success it requires the acquiescence of the States which it concerns. That it implies an invitation to those States, by renewing allegiance to the United States, to resume their functions as States of the Union; but it is a risk that must be taken, as no State can throw a defence over treason. The power of pardon is Executive, vested in the Executive Government of the United States. In exercising that power I have taken every precaution to connect with it the clearest recognition of the binding force of the laws of the United States, and the unqualified acknowledgment of the great change of the condition in regard to slavery which has grown out of the war."

Again he says:

"All parties in the late terrible conflict must work together in harmony. It is not too much to ask, in the name of the whole people, that on the side plan of restoration shall proceed in conformity to the will or willingness to cast the disorders of the past into oblivion; and on the other, the evidence of sincerity in the future maintenance of the Union shall be put beyond any doubt, by a ratification of the proposed amendment to the Constitution which provides for the abolition of slavery forever in the limits of our country. The adoption of the amendment unites the United States beyond all power of disruption again. It is manifest that treason, the most flagrant in character, has been committed, but persons who are charged with its commission should have fair and impartial trials in the highest tribunals of the country, in order that the Constitution and laws may be fully vindicated, truth clearly established and affirmed, that traitors should be punished and the offence made infamous, whilst, at the same time, that the question may be judiciously settled —finally and forever—that no State of its own accord has the right to renounce its place in the Union.

"The relations of the general Government towards the four millions of inhabitants whom the war has called into freedom, has engaged the serious attention of the President, more especially on the propriety of attempting to make the freedmen electors. In the proclamation of the executive, I took for my counsel the Constitution itself, the interpretations of that instrument by its authors and contemporaries and the more recent legislation by Congress." The President thinks the granting of the elective franchise to the freedmen would have been an assumption of power which neither the Constitution or the laws of the United States would have warranted. On the other hand, every danger of conflict is avoided when the settlement of the question is referred to the States themselves. "In my judgement," he says, "the freedmen, if they show patience and many virtues, will the sooner obtain participation in the elective franchise through the States than through the General Government, even if it had the power to intervene. Good faith requires security for the freedmen in their liberty; their right to labor, and their right to claim a part of the returns of their labor." The President urges a dispassionate treatment of this subject aloof from all party strife.

By the report of the Secretary of the Navy, at the commencement of the present year there were in commission 530 vessels, armed with 3,000 guns, manned by 51,000 men. The number of vessels now in commission is 117 with 830 guns, 12,128 men.

By the report of the Secretary at War, the military force, on the 1st of May, was 1,000 516 men. Over eight hundred thousand of these men have been mustered out, and the Department is still rapidly reducing the number. The war estimates reached from $516,240,231 to $33,814,461, which amount, in the opinion of the Department, is adequate for the peace establishment.

The President discusses the financial question at length. He recommends the people to be constantly on their guard to liquidate the debts contracted by a paper currency, and by conducting business as nearly as possible on a cash basis, or short credit, to hold themselves prepared to return to a specie standard. The gradual reduction of the currency is the only measure that can save the business of the country from disastrous calamities. It is estimated by the Secretary of the Treasury that the expenditure for the fiscal year ending 30th of June, 1865, will exceed the receipts $112,194,147. It is gratifying, however, to state that it is also estimated that the revenue for the year ending the 30th of June, 1867, will exceed the expenditures by the sum of $111,682,818. This amount, or so much as may be deemed sufficient for the purpose, may be applied to the reduction of the public debt, which on the 31st day of October, 1865, was $2,740,854,750.

In regard to our relations with Great Britain, the President has declined the proposition of that power for the formation of a joint commission to settle the mutual claims between the two countries.

The President closes with a virtual affirmation of the Monroe Doctrine.

The correspondence between the United States and France, on the subject, at a proper time will be laid before congress.

It is stated that the report of the Secretary of the Navy, places special stress on the necessity of making the Navy Yard at More Island equal to the first depot in the Union. It is intimated that he will recommend that a depot be established on Puget Sound.

The question of the claim of the Hudson Bay Company for lands in Washington Territory is adverted to in various State papers, but from the demands of the company, there is little prospect of the American Government acceding thereto. The San Juan Island question is considered settled as the authorities at Victoria, V. I., have made the products of that island foreign. This act is accepted as a virtual withdrawal of British claims to the Territory.

THE POPULATION OF UTAH.—The recent visit of Speaker Colfax and party to the Mormon world has made the public familiar with many facts concerning the condition and progress of that people. A writer from Salt Lake City says: Now, a population of 100,000 is claimed for Utah, and 20,000 for this city. Perhaps the last figures are too large, but already this is the most populous, as it is the most beautiful town between St. Louis and San Francisco. During the year ending June 1st, Ben. Holladay's Overland Express took $1,612,979 67 in gold dust home to the State—though only a small fraction of the gold goes in by express. Last year a single merchant sold upwards of $1,000,000, worth of goods, and paid for freight alone from the Missouri river over $150,000.

In future under the term "Book Packets" may be forwarded to Denmark, but not to Norway or Sweden, printed proof-sheets, with ordinary corrections in writing.

Letters addressed to any of these Countries may be registered for a fee of 24 cents each in addition to the postage; but upon all such letters the postage must be paid in advance.

And for every additional 2 ounces 8 cents.
Packets of Patterns are subject to the following regulations:—
1st. The Patterns or Samples must not be of intrinsic value. This rule excludes all articles of a saleable nature, and, indeed, whatever may have a value of its own, apart from its mere use as a Pattern or Sample; and the quantity of any material sent ostensibly as a Pattern or Sample must not be so great that it can fairly be considered as having, on this ground, an intrinsic value.
2nd. There must be no writing or printing, in addition to the address of the person for whom the packet is intended, and the address of the sender, other than a trade mark and numbers, and the prices of the articles; and these particulars must, in all cases be given, not on loose pieces of paper, but on small labels attached to the Samples, or the bags containing them.
3rd. The Patterns or Samples must be sent in covers open at the ends, so as to be easy of examination. Samples, however, of seeds, drugs, and so forth, which cannot be sent in open covers, may be enclosed in bags of linen or other material, tied at the neck; or the bags may be entirely closed provided that they be transparent, so that the Officers of the Post-Office may be able to satisfy themselves as to the nature of the contents.
4th. No article likely to injure the contents of the Mail Bags, or the person of any Officer of the Post Office, may be sent through the Post as a Pattern; but the rule is so far relaxed in this case as to permit Patterns of Scissors, Knives, razors, Forks, and such like articles to be forwarded, provided they be packed and guarded in so secure a manner as to afford complete protection to the contents of the Mail bags, whilst, at the same time, the Patterns may be easily examined.
5th. No packet of Patterns or Samples must exceed two feet in length, one foot in breadth or depth, or three pounds in weight.
If either of the foregoing rules be infringed, the packet will not be forwarded.

Post Master General.

Extracts.

A Proud and Haughty Southerner.

Feelin' a little peckish, I went into a eatin house to-day and encountered a young man with long black hair and slender frame. H didn't wear much clothes, and them as he did wear looked unhealthy. He frowned on me, and sed kinder scornful, "So, sir—you come here to taunt us in our hour of trouble do you?" "No," sed I, "I come here for hash!" "Pish-haw!" he sed sneeringly, "I mean you air in this city for the purpose of gloatin' over a fallen people. Others may basely succumb, but as for me, I will never yield—never, never!" "Hav' suthin' to eat!" I pleasantly suggested. "Tea and coffee?" he sed. "I eat with you, but I fiercely;" then he added, "and Yankees! To hate you!" "You've a law," I yon have your which Unpleasantly replied "How sorty of bam... Fried ... with ..." He had ... He at very ravenous. Poor fellow, he eaten lived on odds and ends for several days ... crackers that had bin turned over by ... the bread-tray at the bar. He got full at last, his hart softened a little to' ards me. "After all," he sed, "you have some pepple at the North who air not wholly loathsum beasts!" "Well, yes!" I sed, "we hav' now and then a man among us who isn't a cold-blodded scoundrel. Young man," I mildly but gravely sed, "this crool war is over and you're licked! It's rather necessary for sumbody to lick, in a good, square, lively fite, and in this are case it happens to be the United States of America. You fit splendid, but we was too many for you. Then make the best of it, and let us all give in and put the Republic on a firmer basis nor ever. I don't gloate over your misfortins, my young fren'. Far from it. I'm a old man now, and my hart is softer nor it once was. You see my spectacles is moistend with suthin very like tears. I'm thinkin' of the sea of good rich blud that has been spilt on both sides in this dreadful war! I'm thinkin' of our widders and orfuns North, and of your, in the South. I kin cry for both. B'leeve me, my young fren', I kin place my young 'old hands tenderly on the fair yung head of the Virginy maid whose lover was laid low in the battle dust by a fed'ral bullet, and say, as fervently and piously as a venerable sinner like me kin say anythin', God be good to you, my poor dear, my poor dear!" I rize up to go, and takin' my yung Southern fren' kindly by the hand, I sed, "Yung man, adoo! You Southern fellers is probly my brothers, tho' you've occasionally had a dussed queer way of showin' it! It's over now. Let us all jine in and make a country on this continent that shall giv' all Europe the cramp in the stummock ev'ry time they look at us.—Addoo,—adoo!" And as I am through, I'll likewise say adoo to you, jintle reader, merely remarkin' that the star-spangled banner is wavin' round loose ag'n, and that there don't seem to be anything the matter with the Goddess of Liberty beyond a slight cold.—Artemus Ward.

The sensation of being Murdered.

Mr. Seward and his son, says the Spectator, have each told, at the request of friends, the story of their own sensations at the time of the attempt of assassination; and although, under ordinary circumstances, such relations should certainly be regarded as within that pale of privacy which no public position gives us warrant to invade, yet as, from the nature of the case, the whole affair has been brought before the world in its minutest details, it seems not improper to make this trifling but interesting addition to what is already known. Mr. Frederick Seward said that on stepping from his bedroom into the passage, and seeing the assassin, the merely wondered what he was doing there, and called him to account. On his resisting the fellow's endeavour to press into Mr. Seward's room, he (the assassin) drew a revolver which he presented at Mr. Frederick Seward's head. What followed, is must be remembered, took place in a few seconds. Mr. Frederick Seward's first thought was, "That's a navy revolver." The man pulled the trigger, but it only snapped, and his intended victim thought, "That cap missed fire." His next sensation was that of confusion and being upon the floor, resting upon his right arm, which, like his father's jaw, was barely recovered from a bad fracture—the assassin had felled him to the floor with the butt of the pistol—he put his hand to his head, and, finding a hole there, he thought, "That cap did not miss fire, after all." Then he became insensible, and remained so for two days and more. His first indication of returning consciousness was the question, "Have you got the ball out?" after which he fell again into a comatose condition, which was of long continuance. On the very afternoon of the day when Mr. Lincoln was assassinated, Mr. Frederick Seward, who was Assistant-Secretary of State, had asked his father what preparation should be made for the presentation of Sir Frederick Bruce, which was to take place the next day. Mr. Seward gave him the points of a reply to be made to Sir Frederick, and he laid the outline of the speech on the President's table, and, as we have previously informed our readers, Mr. Lincoln that afternoon wrote out the reply, adopting Mr. Seward's suggestions, and thus preparing that reception of the British Minister by President Johnson which was regarded at the time by the people to whose representative it was addressed as so friendly, so fair, and dignified. Mr. Frederick Seward's first inquiry after he came fully to his senses, which was a long time after the assassination, was, "Has Sir Frederick Bruce been presented?" He thought that only one night had passed, since he knew not what had happened to him, and his mind took up matters just where it had left them. Mr. Seward's mental experience during his supposed assassination was in its nature so like that of his son, that it raises the question whether this absence of consternation and observation of minute particulars is not common in circumstances of unexpected and not fully apprehended peril. Mr. Seward was lying upon his side, close to the edge of his bed, with his head resting in a frame which had been made to give him ease, and to protect his broken jaw from pressure. He was trying to keep awake, having been seized upon by a sick man's fancy—it was, that if he slept he would wake up with lockjaw. He was brought to full consciousness by the scuffle in the passage-way, followed by the entrance of the assassin, and the cry of Miss Seward. "Oh! he will kill my father!" But he saw nothing of his assailant until a hand appeared above his face, and then his thought was, "What handsome cloth that overcoat is made of!" The assassin's face then appeared, and the helpless statesman only thought, "What a handsome man!" (Payne was a fine-looking fellow.) Then came a sensation as of rain striking him smartly upon one side of his face and neck, then quickly the same upon the other side, but he felt no severe pain. This was the assassin's knife. The blood spouted; he thought "My time has come," and, falling from the bed to the floor, fainted. His first sensation of returning consciousness was that he was drinking tea, and that "It tasted good." Mrs. Seward was giving him tea with a spoon. He heard low voices around him, asking and replying as to whether it would be possible for him to recover. He could not speak, but his eyes showed his consciousness, and that he desired to speak. They brought him a porcelain tablet, on which he managed to write, "Give me some more tea; I shall get well." And, from that moment he has slowly but steadily recovered health and strength.

A RICH MINING DISTRICT.—The mineral resources of the lower Sierras skirting Esmeralda County, in Nevada, Mono County and others, in this State, are not only overlooked but the territory itself is but partially explored. To Señor Juan Cima, who has just returned from this region, we are indebted for some very interesting information. The Columbus Mining District is situated about sixty miles south of Aurora. A settlement has been started on the plain, which is surrounded by ranges of argentiferous hills, those thus far prospected lying north of the town. The ledges were discovered less than a year ago. Their general direction is east and west. The Adelaide lead is from 8 to 10 feet in width, and although worked but 2 or 3 feet below the surface yields from $300 to the ton. The Sierra claim has been more extensively worked. At a distance of twenty-five feet the rock pays splendidly! There is no water at the mines, but an abundance of it twelve or fifteen miles distant. Wood is plentiful, too, in this vicinity. A good wagon road leads to the foot hills, which are only about two hundred feet in height. No mills have been erected, but contracts for one or more have been let. Assays from the richest ore yield as high as $1,500 to the ton. Our informant, who does not seem to be at all enthusiastic, believes that no mines elsewhere in Nevada are comparable to these. The Aurorians are, on the contrary, quite excited over the "prospects" of the "Columbus" mines, and it is believed that a large emigration will take place in the spring from that town. The principal claims are the Adelaide, Serbia, Keeketonki, Gibraltar, Balnerte, Revenue, Candelaria, Blanca and Tesoro. We are indebted to Senor Cima for rich specimens of ore from the above named claims.—California Alta.

A CARD.

PROFESSOR WHEELER, would respectfully attract the attention of the Hongkong Public to the importance of having the Hair Cut and Dressed in an Artistic manner and style. Appropriate to the Individual is the cut of the Hair; there can be no fixed or prevailing fashion without destroying almost universally the harmony of the tout ensemble. Indeed as diverse at is the contour of the human head and facial outline, just so peculiar should be the trim and arrangement of the Hair. This fact is noted upon by only those Hair-Cutters who possess an inherent judgment in matters of taste, cultivated and improved by incessant study and application. Of this rare class, Professor WHEELER, humbly claims to be one, and the Only One in this Colony, and he is modestly but confidently invites all who may be distrustful of his ability to give him at least a trial before pronouncing an adverse opinion. He may be found at all hours of the day in his Apartments adjoining the Private Entrance of the Oriental Hotel.
